SMITH & MCCOMB BROS.

He lived just a mile from the village,
Out there by a fork of the road;
His farm, by the help of good tillage,
Increased what he planted and sowed.
His dwelling was low and old-fashioned;
The roof was all covered with moss;
But still by his fixing and patching
It kept out the rain and the frost.
He lived very peaceful and quiet;
We knew him as Jeremy Todd;
So plain were his dress and his diet, SMITH & MCCOMB BROS. So plain were his dress and his diet, The neighbors all said he was "odd." 105 Douglas Av.

> The fashions he never would follow; Nor try to put on any style; But, owing a dime or a dollar, He paid it when due, with a smile His words were but few, but well chosen;
> 'Twas clear that he meant what he said.
> His temper not heated nor frozen,
> And calm was the life that he led. He did not belong to the meeting,
> And said very little of God;
> But the orphans were glad of his greeting,
> And every one said he was odd.

To husk out his corn by the day,
And heaped up the grain on the bushel
To measure the wheat for his pay.

His neighbors he helped in affliction—
The people all thought he was odd. And which are warranted to be equal to anything in the market. Call and examine our stock and work.
